Rackham Graduate School is providing funds to encourage and support doctoral students from the University of Michigan to attend ISR summer programs in 2024. This financial support, in the form of grants administered by the Institute for Social Research, will be available on a competitive basis to a limited number of doctoral students enrolled at the University of Michigan. These grants will provide summer program fee support for participation in either or both the Summer Institute in Survey Research Techniques sponsored by the Survey Research Center \(SRC\), or the Summer Program in Quantitative Methods at the Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research \(ICPSR\). Grants will be awarded in the form of "non-credit" program fees.

Eligibility Criteria

The purpose of the awards is to identify and support University of Michigan doctoral students with the potential to develop careers using social science research approaches through the knowledge and training offered by participation in the SRC Summer Institute and the ICPSR Summer Program. The importance of the application of social science skills in multiple disciplines (including and beyond traditional social sciences fields) and other career areas is also recognized.

These funds are limited and available to doctoral students across all Rackham Divisions. Preference will be given to students who have not taken ICPSR/SRC courses before. Rackham Graduate School will pay for two-thirds (2/3) of the non-credit program registration fee only if there is department or faculty support covering the remaining one-third (1/3) cost. These awards can only be used to cover the program registration fee for Summer Institute survey methodology courses marked as carrying 3-6 course hours, or any quantitative methodology courses in the ICPSR Summer Program, including both courses in the General Sessions as well as Topical Workshops.

If you have questions, please contact the Summer Institute in Survey Research Techniques at isr-summer@umich.edu or the ICPSR Summer Program at sumprog@icpsr.umich.edu.
